

of drunken fathers is epileptic. One out of every four children of drunken fathers is feeble minded. One out of every five children of drunken fathers is insane. That is science, not sickly sentiment.

The mother knows instinctively that she should not become the mother of any more children to a drunken man. She rebels and would cast him off. Within her struggle all the most sacred emotions of the race, trying to preserve itself clean and wholesome.

Nothing but the mad fear of seeing her normal children taken from her makes her tolerate this man, this menace to the race.

Shall the judge send her back to live with him? What would you do in such a case?

Do you know that all over free America there is going up a cry for more insane asylums? Do you know that doctors are calling for more homes for feeble minded children? Do you know there are not nearly enough places to receive the epileptics?

Shall we build more insane asylums, or stop breeding lunatics?

Shall we build more retreats for idiots, or stop breeding idiots?

The mothers of the poor do not want any more insane, idiotic and sub-normal children. The mothers of the poor want only healthy babies and enough necessities to rear those babies in continued health.

What would you do in such a case?

Society owes it to itself to stop this plain breeding of degenerates.

Should the state provide compensation for destitute mothers? Answer the question yourself.

REAL FISH CHOWDER

Three pounds of fish, cut in pieces.

Four cups of sliced potatoes.

One-fourth of a pound of salt pork, cut in thin slices.

One small onion, sliced thin.

One-half a pound of fresh Boston crackers.

Fry the pork in a deep kettle until brown but not burned, lay over a layer of fish, then a layer of potatoes and onions, well drenched with salt and pepper, repeat alternate layers until all is used. Pour on hot water not quite to cover and boil till potatoes are tender.

In another saucepan heat four cups of milk, and when potatoes are tender add it to the chowder with one heaping-tablespoon of butter, the crackers having first been split and soaked for one minute in warm milk and water.

Boil at once and the dish is done. The broth should be of a consistency of thin cream soup.

Cod, haddock, striped bass, white fish or pickerel are good to make this chowder, which will make an entire dinner of itself with the addition of a simple dessert.

Time to cook, one-half hour.

Tramp (entering taxidermist's)

—Do you stuff all kinds of things here? Taxidermist—Why, yes. Tramp—Well, I wish you'd stuff me with a good dinner.